THE TRIAL OF THE SANDS OF TIME

Helene Aylon is a New York-based process artist who uses a variety of media in her work, including painting, sculpture, performance and video. She has close ties to the Bay Area, where she has exhibited and worked extensively. In 1980, she began a decade-long project dedicated to ecological concerns.

In a number of performance events, she gathered earth and sand from all around the country, from specific "crisis sites," both natural and man-made - earth from the San Andreas Fault and the Livermore Weapons Lab, sand from the San Onofre Nuclear Power Plant. She began salt and sand gatherings at Death Valley and at the shores of the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, involving different groups of women - pregnant women, and mothers with their draft-age sons, for example - then used these salts and sands in performance events and for artifacts and objects of art.

Photo: Marion Gray

In February of 1981, she presented the first two major performance events using these gatherings, entitled "Sand Sounds" and "Sand Carrying/Sand Sacs," in the San Francisco Women's Building. About 350 people sat on ten tons of purchased sand that carpeted the floor like an indoor beach. Two hundred more watched from above in the balcony. During "Sand Sounds," the audience listened as the earth from the San Andreas Fault was released from hand-sewn sacs high in the building and sifted onto a metal landing. This was then covered by the "healing" salt from Death Valley. The earth from near the weapons lab and the nuclear plant was presented in separate, sealed plexiglas containers and covered with shoreline sands. During "Sand Carrying/Sand Sacs" the audience drew up the corners of 500 pieces of muslin that lined the floor, made "sacs" and carried them outside. These were then trucked to a storage facility, Richard's Fine Art Handlers.

Subsequently, Aylon learned that the "sac" sculpture had been dumped outside under some metal and boards, rather than stored inside, according to the agreement with the company for which she had been paying for four years. The "sacs" were, in her words, "moldy, smelly, tattered, stained...." Aylon took legal action against the company, but in the 1988 trial, the jury found in favor of the company, and ordered Aylon to pay all court costs. A request for a new trial was denied. An appeal to a higher court would have been prohibitively expensive.

Aylon decided to bring her case to the public through "Inquiry: The Trial of the Sands of Time," an installation and performance representing the visual metamorphosis of an artist, her trial, and justice, in Fort Mason's Pier 3. The performance/trial/reception takes place Friday, February 17 at 5:30pm; the installation Saturday through Tuesday, noon to 4pm; and a closing performance by Anna Halprin, "A Dedication to the Sands of Time," Tuesday, 3 to 4pm. Admission is free. For information, call 563-7445.

CHINESE REGIONAL COSTUMES & TEXTILES

Of China's approximately 55 national minorities, more than half are found in Guizhou Province, an area of high, rugged landscape and difficult access. The traditional dress of these independent people has changed very little from ancient times. Each nationality has its own distinguishing costume variations. For example, the Miao, one of China's largest minorities, can be divided into at least 130 distinct dress groups in Guizhou Province.

These living, though ancient, textile traditions are on the threshold of rapid change due to China's current modernization drive. The younger generation is losing interest in continuing the time-consuming traditional methods of dress construction and decoration as machine-made clothing becomes available.

The San Francisco Craft and Folk Art Museum presents a glowing exhibition of the beautiful costumes and textiles of this remote province, encompassing an extensive variety of traditional techniques from southwest China.

Miao women from Congjiang County wear a costume similar to that worn by the neighboring Dong nationality

Included in the exhibition are weaving, spinning, embroidery, wax and stitch-resist cloth, tree sap and pig's fat-resist cloth, natural dyeing, tin decorations, silk-felt applique, and folded gold-paper embroidery, as well as tools, jewelry, and complete costumes.

The exhibition opened January 2, and continues through February 26. The Museum, in Fort Mason's Landmark Building A, is open Tuesday through Sunday, 11am to 5pm, with a $1.00 admission charge for the exhibit. On Saturdays from 10am to noon, admission is free. Museum members are admitted free; admission to the gift shop is free. For information, call 775-0990.

ORCHIDS BY THE BAY

Thousands of exotic plants, from every continent except Antarctica, are on exhibit and for sale at the 37th annual show sponsored by the San Francisco Orchid Society, in Fort Mason's Pier 2. Amateur, professional, and junior growers compete for over 30 awards, displaying their finest plants. Some one-of-a-kind orchids could be worth as much as $5,000, although most specimens range in price from $5 to $500. Some of the more exotic orchids on display are from Costa Rica, Peru, Brazil, Japan, Thailand, Vietnam and the Philippines.

The San Francisco Orchid Society is a non-profit organization dedicated to public education and the sharing of information on orchids, especially that pertaining to culture and breeding techniques.

The show is open to the public February 24, 25, and 26. Friday evening there is a preview show from 6 to 9pm. An $8 donation includes wine-tasting and cheese. Saturday, from 10am to 5pm and Sunday, from 10am to 4pm, admission by donation is $4 for adults, $2 for children under 12, seniors, and disabled. For additional show details and ticket information, call 332-9100.

The long-awaited parking area repavement project has begun at Fort Mason. As a result, at various, and unfortunately unpredictable, times during the next six months you may find loud construction noises, mud puddles, and temporary detours. Also, there will be reduced parking availability throughout the construction period, so use of public transportation and carpooling is recommended. Your tolerance, cooperation, and awareness of construction hazards are appreciated.

Recycling Center The SF Community Recyclers' site at Fort Mason Center is temporarily closed due to parking lot construction. Call 285-0669 for information & other locations.

Thank You!
